Dear Anna,

I wish I were going to see you to-morrow too as I'm going to see Helen. I'm looking forward to it a lot; Captain is coming in with her and take us around; I'm going to meet them at nine fifty two in South Station. I guess we'll have a good time all right.

I wear my class pin all the time. It's so nice to have one like the other girls. I don't see how you ever happened to think of giving me one. I wanted to sign up for one and then thought I'd better not; and I'm so happy that I have one. I'll wear it home at Easter vacation, which isn't so awfully far off. I'm not going to count the weeks until exams are all over, then I hope I'll be pleasantly surprised.

My exams are all over but two which come the end of this week. I've had four at the very end of the week and my brain sure has worked overtime. Yesterday I had two. English and German, both were two hours and a quarter long, so I wrote four hours and a half altogether.
My Botany is the worst I've had yet. I surely don't like science. People say next term is more interesting, when we begin to study flowers. the last part of this term has been interesting about trees, but the first part about plant cells was horrid.
The Harvard man I told you about is coming over to see me when exams are over. He called me up the other day and talked and talked. I thought he'd never stop. He's nice, but I like some one with a little more "sport" in them and not quite so much brain.

He's taken Harvard in three years; no such sharks for me.

I've been just crazy to be home lately to go slughing with Billy. Last night the moon was great and the slughing fine and I did wish I could go for a slightride, instead I went to bed which was probably better for me, after the strenuous day.

Lois Durant and I walked back from exams together and she told me to go over with her and we'd make fudge. So I did, it was awfully good. One night when I was over there she had some fine caramels, so yesterday I asked her for the recipe.

If you want to make some sometime this makes real good ones.

2 squares chocolate

2 cups brown sugar

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup water

Boil until it is real brittle in water, then take it off the stove and stir in a $\frac{1}{4}$ cup of butter, don't stir it any more then but put it in the pan.

It's pure fine and didn't have the molassy taste that the ones Walter and I made did. Oh, and by the way, you might inform Williard that if he doesn't write pretty quick, I will be mad. He hasn't written once since I've been back. Although maybe you needn't, I guess if he doesn't want to, he needn't.
With lots of love,
Jane
